

DEAD IN TROPICAL HURRICANE TOTAL 800 WITH 900 INJURED IN CITY OF SANTO DOMINGO; RESCUE AND RELIEF SQUADS ENDEAVOR TO PENETRATE ISLANDS

All Telegraph and Cable Communications Still Disrupted, Making Assistance to Needy in Dominican Republic Difficult—Storm Reported Approaching Cuba and Florida, With Intensity Gradually Decreasing.

(By International News Service)

Eight hundred known dead and 900 injured were counted today in the city of Santo Domingo, capital of the Dominican Republic, following a terrific hurricane on Wednesday.

Rescue and relief squads still endeavoring to penetrate the central provinces of the island, where even greater disaster is feared.

All telegraphic and cable communications with the island still disrupted, with extra details working at top speed to restore communication facilities.

Governor Theodore Roosevelt of Porto Rico organizing relief measures, announces in a report from his personal representative sent to the stricken area that hunger and thirst threaten Dominican inhabitants.

Property damage in the city estimated at $15,000,000. Three-fourths of Santo Domingo buildings demolished.

Twenty killed by the hurricane on the tiny island of Dominica in the leeward island group, with much property damage.

Haiti, which escaped the storm, rushing relief expeditions by land and sea.

Hurricane now slowly approaching Cuba and Florida, although its intensity is gradually decreasing.

HAVANA, Sept. 5.—(INS)—Radio messages received here indicated that smaller islands in the vicinity of Santo Domingo Republic also had suffered severely in the hurricane that devastated the main island.

According to information today, the tiny mountainous island of Dominica in the Leeward Islands suffered 20 deaths and many injuries when the typhoon struck Wednesday with all its force. The property damage was immense, and the only wireless station on the little island was wrecked.

Dominica, largest of five presidencies in the Leeward Islands, has about 30,000 inhabitants and an area of 300 square miles. A large part of the population consists of Negro slaves.

PORT AU PRINCE, Sept. 5.—(INS)—Heavy wind and rain swept across Haiti on the tail end of the hurricane which devastated Santo Domingo, without inflicting much damage here.

Relieved that the brunt of the storm spent itself elsewhere, Haiti was busy today rushing relief to the stricken neighbors. The Government dispatched supplies and medical needs and scores of rescue workers. Another party bearing emergency supplies was making its way to the neighboring republic over the high mountains which Wednesday fended off the violent storm.

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Sept. 5.—(INS)—The cataclysm of death which rode a path of devastation, hunger and suffering laid by a terrific hurricane across the city and Dominican Republic left approximately 1,000 fatalities in its wake and as many injuries, according to today's estimates.

A day and night of groping by native rescue squads amidst the appalling ruins and scenes of horror revealed that the four-hour storm of unprecedented fury which roared out of the Caribbean on Wednesday demolished three-fourths of the city, destroying power and water plants. Even greater disaster was feared on penetration into the unreported inland provinces.

President Rafael Trujillo, personally directing first relief attempts, issued an official announcement estimating the dead at 800 and injuries at 900. A list would be greatly augmented as rescue workers progressed in their task of extracting victims from the shambles of a city in ruins.

FRENCH FLIERS WILL RETURN TO NEW YORK

Happy in Claiming Award of $25,000 for Paris-New York-Dallas Hop

SOUTH'S BIG WELCOME

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 5.—(INS)—With the echoes of a riotous and spontaneous welcome still ringing in their ears, Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte prepared to depart for New York today in their transatlantic seaplane, the Question Mark.

The French aviators, first to span the Atlantic westward from Paris to New York in a non-stop flight, landed their scarlet plane on Love Field here yesterday at 5:29:35 p. m., claiming the $25,000 Easterwood prize posted for the first Paris to Dallas flight.

They completed the New York to Dallas hop in 11 hours and 33 minutes under ideal flying conditions. Captain Coste planned to leave here at 7 or 8 o'clock this morning on his return flight to New York, stopping overnight at Louisville, Ky., and continuing to New York Saturday.

An estimated throng of 10,000 persons broke through the guard of police and National Guardsmen and swarmed about the Question Mark last evening when the powerful plane landed and taxied toward the hangars. After welcoming ceremonies at the field, the two Frenchmen led a parade through the downtown streets of Dallas.

HILLTOWN CITIZENS TALK CONSOLIDATION

Boro' Incorporation of Blooming Glen Deemed Unlikely to Occur

BOTH SIDES WELL TAKEN

HILLTOWN, Sept. 5.—Citizens of the upper section of Hilltown township took up the problem of the consolidation of schools at a meeting held at Blooming Glen in the Community Hall.

Dr. Lee Driver, of the State Department of Public Instruction, Harrisburg, was the principal speaker, and answered the questions of the township residents on the problem before them.

Both sides of the controversy were well taken by the large group that comprised the audience and the possible withdrawing of Blooming Glen from the township and becoming a borough was taken up in detail.

The possibility of this occurring was discounted by J. H. Hoffman, superintendent of schools of Bucks county, who expressed the belief that this would not happen.

"Only twice in the history of the state has anything of the kind happened, when one community in a township incorporated as a borough, causing a split in the school district in a case such as before Hilltown," Mr. Hoffman pointed out.

"No community can simply withdraw from the neighboring section, and leave it financially embarrassed. Before incorporation can be effected, there must be state approval of the action, and the state will not approve of one group doing something to the detriment of the rest of the community," said Mr. Hoffman.

Mr. Driver was present for the purpose of answering questions, and took up the problem of location, size and methods of placing the issue before the public.

"It is my opinion that, while it would be possible to take the matter up at the general election this fall, you would do better to hold a special election for the sole purpose of deciding the school problem," Mr. Driver suggested.

"At general election time you have

DRIVER EVADES THUGS AND SAVES HIS CARGO

Hi-Jackers Thought Glycerine Was Load of Liquor, Police Believe

OCCURRED WEDNESDAY

Thinking that a truck load of glycerine was a truck load of liquor, hi-jackers Wednesday afternoon attempted to hold up the driver on the Lincoln Highway one mile from Morrisville.

Quick thinking on the part of the truck driver frustrated a robbery of 22 barrels of glycerine.

Four bandits, riding in a speedy sedan, forced the truck to one side of the road, and yelled to the driver to stop and get out.

Then they went up the road about 20 yards and turned around, fully expecting the driver to be standing on the roadway with his hands in the air.

But they were surprised to find that the operator, Charles Smith, of 2917 North Orianna Street, Philadelphia, had leaped from his truck and was racing wildly for a nearby service station.

For a few minutes they hesitated and then they again turned around and sped away in the direction of Philadelphia.

Smith ran to a telephone and summoned Pennsylvania State Police of the Morrisville Station. Trooper Keuch hurried to the scene and searched the roads for a half-hour before abandoning the chase.

Then he escorted the truck to South Langhorne where members of the State Patrol took up the burden and saw the truck safely to city line.

The attempted hold-up occurred in broad daylight and was one of the most daring bits of handiwork in this section for some time.

Smith said that he was driving west on the highway at 4 o'clock when he noticed that a dark sedan, approaching from the rear, was gradually edging him from the road. In order to avoid an accident he swerved his car sharply and then he heard a voice yell: "Get over on the side and get out of your car."

Realizing that a hold-up was about to take place Smith leaped from his car and ran to the service station. Once or twice he looked about and noticed that the men were standing in the middle of the road as if they were undecided on future action. As he ran into the station he took a final glimpse and saw that the men had driven away.

Buried in Bristol

STEPHEN C. BLANCH

Stephen C. Blanch, 25, died Saturday at his home, 619 Pavonia avenue, Jersey City, after being ill in bed for 28 months. He was born in Jersey City, attending Manresa Hall, a military academy, formerly conducted on Summit avenue, that city. He also went to St. Peter's High School, Jersey City, and St. Francis College, Brooklyn.

At the latter institution he won a scholarship and was in his first year in New York University when his health broke down. Mr. Blanch was the son of Mary Murphy Blanch and the late Edward Blanch and a brother of Leonard, Andrew, Clair, Marie, Regina and Celestia Blanch, of Jersey City. He also had relatives in Bristol among whom were Mrs. Mantus Sweeney, of Buckley street.

HENRY B. GARRIGUES HAS HARVARD SCHOLARSHIP

One of Two Selected by The Long Island Harvard Club For Outstanding Work

HAS EXCELLENT RECORD

One who is now a resident of this section, Henry B. Garrigues, son of Alfred H. Garrigues, has received a scholarship for Harvard, through the Long Island Harvard Club.

The young man, who has within the past few months, graduated from Newtown High School, Elmhurst, Long Island, had the fifth highest average in a class of 350 students.

The medical field has been selected by young Garrigues, who during the next 10 years will study at the famed institution of learning. Harvard is reputed to have the longest medical course of any university, and Mr. Garrigues who recently came from Long Island to take up his residence in Edgely, will have four years of pre-medical study, four years in the course of medicine, and two years of internship.

Two scholarships are awarded annually in the boroughs of Queens and Brooklyn, the donor being Mrs. Anna C. Boyd, who established these scholarships in memory of her late son who was killed in the World War. The scholarship is for a one-year period, it being a widely known fact that those who make good at Harvard in their Freshman year are given sufficient opportunities to secure other scholarships and awards.

The high school record of young Michael A. Torano, recording and financial of the Manhattan Soap Company, here, is one to be proud of. He stood fifth highest in his class, and was recently presented with a bronze medal for outstanding work in French during the four-year course. His percentage in chemistry was 95.

In seeking the scholarship received by Garrigues there were several thousand students from dozens of high schools in Queens and Brooklyn to compete with. Records of the five or six best students in each graduating class were thoroughly scrutinized, and their averages and scholastic records taken into consideration. Interviews were then in order, and the large group entertained at a luncheon at the Harvard Club. Of the many vying for honors Garrigues was one of the two selected as the most outstanding and worthy.

The young man, so signally honored, followed the general course during his high school days, but some time ago decided to follow a medical career. His grandfather, the late Henry J. Garrigues, was a noted gynaecologist, and an authority in obstetrics. The late Henry J. Garrigues was known to some in Bristol, Dr. William C. LeCompte having been among those attending lectures given by the well-known physician.

Garrigues will commence his course at Harvard on September 19th.

ROTARY CLUB HOST TO COLLEGE BOYS

Entertain Boys of Bristol Area Who Are to Enter College

DR. WAGNER SPEAKER

Boys from the Bristol area who are to enter college this term for the first time were guests of the Bristol Rotary Club at luncheon yesterday at the regular weekly meeting of the Club.

Those accepting the invitation of the club included Samuel Dries, William Wischer, William Rotunno, Irvin Levinson, Jacob Tranotti, Bristol; John Wright, Tullytown.

Dries will enter the University of Pennsylvania Wharton School of Finance and will also study law. Wright goes to State College and will pursue a course in ceramic engineering; Wischer will go to State College and study chemical engineering; Rotunno, Temple University Law School; Levinson, Philadelphia College of Pharmacy; Tranotti, Philadelphia College of Pharmacy.

Minor Hill, president of Rotary Club, presided at the meeting and extended greetings to the guests of the afternoon.

Dr. J. Fred Wagner addressed the boys and in his talk dwelt upon four of the outstanding principles which he said would to a great extent determine their success in their chosen professions:

1. Work or the application to their studies.
2. Dormitory life.
3. Acquaintanceship with their instructors.
4. Clean living.

Taking the first principle the speaker dwelt at length upon the subject of "work." He impressed upon the boys the fact that they would not attain their objective if they loafed at college. "It means hard work and you must apply yourself and make up your mind that you are going to college to work and not to play. Of course there will be the usual period for play and recreation."

Dr. Wagner also urged the boys to live in dormitories as by so doing they would form friendships and contacts with other students which would mean much to them in after life and they would obtain many of the character building contacts obtainable in no other way.

He urged the boys to form a close acquaintanceship with their instructors and he said that much would be gained by fellowship with them. "For the most part you will find them idealists but if you get their point of view you will be the better for it."

Clean living was stressed by Dr. Wagner and he told the boys that clean living was absolutely necessary and that they must forever keep before them high ideals and build character beyond reproach.

RUNAWAY BOYS

POLICE HUNT FOR MAN WHO ATTACKED WOMAN IN HOME

Mrs. Stephen Curtin Choked Into Insensibility; Cut Intruder's Face

FOUND ON THE FLOOR

Officers Are Making Careful Search and Expect To Locate Man

MORRISVILLE, Sept. 5.—Morrisville police and Pennsylvania State Police are looking for a man who entered the home of Mrs. Stephen Curtin, 127 North Lafayette Street, Morrisville, on Wednesday night and choked her into unconsciousness. Police believe they will pick him up because of the fact that he was cut about the face with a heavy vanity case.

Mrs. Curtin, with her husband, returned home about 10 o'clock and found the house ransacked. Believing that the thief had left, Curtin instructed his wife to remain in the house while he went for a policeman. He found Patrolman George Rose and the two returned to the Curtin home where they found the doors locked.

Chief Cooper was summoned and the three men forced a rear door. They found Mrs. Curtin lying senseless on the floor with blood spattered on the wall, showing that there had been a fierce struggle. The woman's neck was badly bruised. When she was revived she said that she heard the burglar coming from a trap door leading to the attic. As he came down the steps she struck him with the vanity case and he seized her neck and threatened to kill her if she called for help.

Curtin and the officers searched the neighborhood, but could find no trace of the robber. An examination showed that no loot had been taken.

Mrs. Curtin, as Miss Ruth Steiner, was arrested three years ago for an alleged attack upon Miss Mary C. Bones, a teacher in the Morrisville High School.

The then Miss Steiner, having been expelled from the school, attacked the teacher on a Morrisville street. In defense of her conduct, Miss Steiner said that Miss Bones was in the habit of sneering at her when they met. The teacher was knocked down but the Steiner girl said that Miss Bones first pushed her.

Subsequently Miss Steiner was fined $100 in the Bucks County Court after being found guilty of assault.

The honored ones were William F. Carson and James W. Lefferts. The former joined February 7, 1895, and has been secretary since 1921. The latter has been a member since July 28, 1886, and a trustee since 1914. Both are past grand.

Each of the honored ones were presented with service jewels and the speech of presentation was made by P. G. Wilkin Davis, Oxford Lodge, No. 14.

Members of Oxford Lodge, last night, visited the Bristol lodge and Davis gave a musical sketch. He is known as the "Musical Junk Man."

Addresses were made by P. G. Bratton, of Apollo Lodge, Philadelphia; and P. G. Anthony Pittaro, Garibaldi Lodge, Trenton, N. J.

Refreshments were served and a very enjoyable evening spent.

Takes Shoes Off; Arrested For Exposure

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Jacob Rosenbaum's feet cost him exactly $250 each in an Evanston police court recently.

"You are arrested for indecent exposure," said the officer. "You have publicly disrobed, contrary to the statutes."

The judge seconded Witt's witty deduction and fined Rosenbaum $5, declaring the obvious intention made him guilty.

A MEMORIAL TO WASHINGTON

No more fitting recognition of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington, which will be celebrated in February, 1932, could be given than the planting of 10 million trees as proposed by the American Tree Association. Of all memorials none could have pleased the first president more.

While history decreed that he should be remembered as a general, statesman and patriot and his military achievements loomed larger in the imaginations of others than in his own, George Washington would have preferred to be known as his country's best farmer.

He devoted much of his life to making his country better governmentally and economically, but considered it as a sacrifice. As soon as he realized that his country and countrymen no longer needed him he retired to his plantation to take up those pursuits nearest his heart and uppermost in his fancy.

"I am led to reflect how much more delightful is the task of making improvements upon earth," he wrote during his retirement to private life.

And what more delightful improvement upon the earth can be made than its beautification by the planting of trees? Just as he surrounded himself with trees, he would, if living today, desire to see trees growing upon every foot of idle ground.

Ten million trees, no matter where planted, will form a memorial that will be useful as well as ornamental and permanent. What more could be asked of a memorial.

OUR HERITAGE

Our forefathers came to the new world to seek religious freedom and escape the tyranny of kings. Men and women with indomitable courage, faith and those priceless characteristics that are the essence of stalwart manhood and womanhood, battled through countless hardships to establish their homes. War and pestilence depleted their number and again but an unconquerable spirit vanquished discouragement and gave birth to harmony and contentment. A new country arose from the skilled handiwork of our forefathers. God's master hand was resplendent in all its glory with its wonderful magnitude, prolific forests, sparkling streams and fertile soil.

We have enjoyed the fruits of their labor and the substantial nature of their uprightness of action came to us in abundance.

The next generation will follow the trails we blaze for them. Will they lead them to better things or into the quicksand of greed, waste, fulness and lustful living?

Let us take care that we revere the memory of our fruitful heritage and may the precepts of our ancestors help us to maintain those ideals of righteousness, justice and liberty that are cherished by all mankind.

Many a fight is not for rights but for wants.

It is very easy to rise in your own estimation.

A good name, like great riches, is often faded.

Joseph Dixon and Miss Hattie Scott, of Philadelphia, spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell, of Newtown, paid a visit to Mr. and Mrs. John G. Muth on Saturday.

Jerry March, a model with brains and beauty, was powerless to keep her roommates, Francine and Constance, from teasingly wadding their lives. She was unhappy herself for she was in love with Tony Jardine, oldest son of the owner of the department store where they worked, and he had proved to be not so honorable. But when Francine, who had money, was picked up by a thief and a possible accessory, Jerry was overwhelmed. On the same night, she happened to overhear David, Tony's younger brother, with whom Constance had gone off some benefit of clergy, planning his marriage to a society girl. Before Jerry could tell Constance, David forestalled her. Jerry returned to Constance's luxurious apartment to find David gone and her in a state of collapse.

CHAPTER 16

A Pica.

That night Jerry stayed with Constance in the apartment, but the next day she thought it better for Connie to move out. To leave her in the midst of surroundings that repeated, hour by hour, how happy she had once been and how desolate she now was could only be dangerous. Nor was it possible to leave her entirely alone. Yet Jerry had to be at the store every day.

At length Jerry decided that Constance must come to live with her till she had gained some measure of resignation. She arranged with the landlady to look in on the girl from time to time—a task much to Mrs. Hinkel's liking, though Jerry resented the necessity. Constance made no demur. She let Jerry pack her clothes, she let Jerry take her home, she resented Mrs. Hinkel without interest or protest. She seemed to have no hope for herself and no wishes. And thus she and Jerry became roommates again.

Gradually Jerry thought that she noticed some change in Connie's attitude. In the early fall, she believed that Constance had begun to pluck up courage. She made attempts to help Jerry at night to clean the apartment and prepare the meals. She took a listless interest in Jerry's job and even asked for gossip about the girls. Now and then she mentioned that she would go back to work—but not, it was silently understood, at Jardine's. The landlady no longer had to be commended to watch her.

Still Jerry was always in a hurry to get home to the narrow room. When night fell and the lights of the city sparkled in their window, lights beckoning to joy and luxury and love, then the shadows darkened Constance's face anew, then her would open and bleed afresh and Jerry was afraid for her.

At 5:15, Jardine's closing hour, Jerry pushed her way through the crowd around the time clock and extracted her card. She had no friends among the girls now and listened to their chatter without comment, though it exactly echoed her sentiments.

"What a day!" the girls told each other and, "Gee, I'm dead." "We had a classmate in the kitchen—was that a killa horse?" "Another month and they'll start jammin' up the Christmas stock—" And one girl summed up the whole situation in one timeless and completely satisfactory phrase. "If it ain't one thing, it's another."

Jerry got her belongings out of her locker, shut the door and looked it and was about to go, when one of the matrons puffed toward her calling from a distance, "Oh, Miss March—the Employment Office wants to see you before you go."

"What about?"

Stopping in her tracks, bewildered, she anxiously scanned the woman's face.

"Now how should I know?" the matron demanded.

There was nothing to do but be flippant to cover the awful sinking of her heart. "Well," she said with a little shrug, "maybe I won't have a job tomorrow."

They were taking girls on now, she remembered, not laying them off—there were only a couple of months till Christmas—but this failed to reassure her. And she stood outside the office of the employment manager, marked upside down "Mr. Greenstein," she went nervously over anything she might have done that would get her fired. But there was nothing. She hadn't been late—hadn't skipped a day—hadn't dared do so, not with the rent to pay and Constance to support.

Well, there was no help for it! If she got fired—then she did and that was that! She marched in with her chin up.

Tony Jardine was sitting behind Mr. Greenstein's desk. There was no one else in the office. He got up, smiling, and put out a hand which Jerry ignored.

She said stiffly, "Oh, I beg your pardon—I thought Mr. Greenstein was here—he sent for me."

"Wait a minute," he urged.

Jerry hesitated.

"I'm taking his place for a moment—" he indicated the chair beside the desk and asked, "Won't you please sit down?"

After all, he was one of her employers, so Jerry sat down. She would not let him see that he annoyed her. She meant to keep this interview on the most business-like basis. Her eyes impersonal and her face hard, she sat forward on the very edge of her chair.

"Perhaps this isn't quite square shooting, Jerry," he began in low, earnest tones, "I suppose I shouldn't have sent for you this way. But I couldn't let another day go by without talking to you. He looked toward her for some encouragement, but Jerry kept herself erect and aloof. Nevertheless, he went on. He was very sincere.

Leaning toward her, he said, "Jerry, this is straight—can't we be friends?"

"And look at the view!" suggested Jerry with a lift of her brows.

He flushed as her eyes strayed mockingly around the room as if in search of something. "What a pit; you haven't a disappearing staircase here!" she added.

"That's hitting below the belt," Tony cried, "taking an unfair advantage—"

"You're the one that's taking an unfair advantage!" He stared at her at a loss. "Because your name happens to be Jardine?"

"Oh, come now," he said, "you can't

COSTE AND BELLONTE CROSS-ON STANAVO

"STANDARD'S" FAMOUS AVIATION GASOLINE

THE SUPERIOR PERFORMANCE OF STANAVO AVIATION GASOLINE USED ON THE NON-STOP FLIGHT FROM PARIS TO NEW YORK AS WELL AS ON OUR WORLD'S DISTANCE RECORD FLIGHT—PARIS TO MANCHURIA—WAS VERY GRATIFYING. WE PLAN TO USE STANAVO GASOLINE EXCLUSIVELY ON FUTURE FLIGHTS.

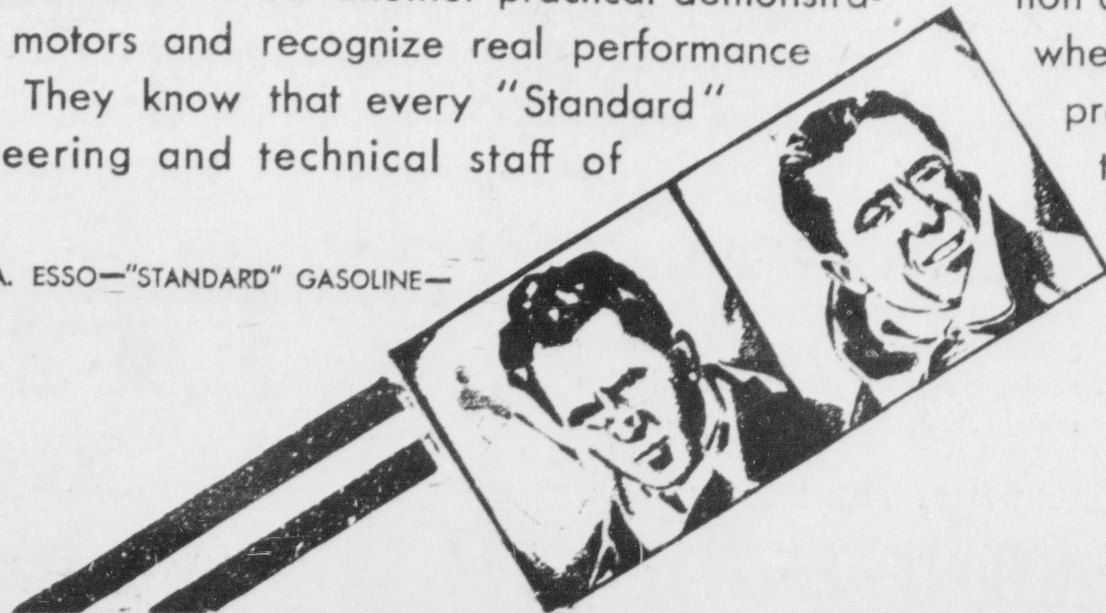

DEUDONNE COSTE
MAURICE BELLONTE

"America—We are Here!" That was the message of the humming Hispano motor as the "Question Mark" gracefully landed on Curtiss field at twilight Tuesday. ☆ Coste and Bellonte did it—the feat which no one had ever before accomplished—a non-stop flight from Paris to New York! Undaunted courage, a thorough knowledge of navigation, unsurpassed skill in airmanship—these—plus an unfaltering motor—were the qualities which brought them through. ☆ It was natural that Coste—noted for his extreme care in preparing for all of his many air ventures—should use Stanavo Aviation Gasoline for this flight as he did in setting the world's distance record (Paris to Manchuria). ☆ This successful flight of the "Question Mark" is but another practical demonstration of the "GOOD LUCK" that is built into "Standard" whether it be in an airplane engine or in an auto-product is made according to the rigid specifications set up by the engineering and technical staff of the world's greatest oil company. ☆ ☆ ☆

GEORGE KELLY AT HOME AMONG CHICAGO CUBS

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Always with his nose held high near the clouds where he may partake of the purest factory smoke and airplane fumes, George Lange Kelly finds himself nothing more than thoroughly satisfied today in his new first baseman job with the pennant seeking Chicago Cubs. It seems this man Kelly, who is very much of a pole, even though he isn't Polish, and who never fails to enjoy himself immensely at all times, should experience downright glee in his current environment. George, being the type of player who usually plays one game and then hobbles about swathed in bandages the next two, may discover Utopia among the Cubs, for no one in the majors is more notorious than they in the matter of laying out and laying up players.

Practically every McCarthy henchman has already been stricken at one time or another with some ailment or other and it really appeared that this phenomenal record would be shattered unless perhaps each victim were to be afflicted completely again following which their buttons would be duly blown off. Indeed, this is precisely what has occurred in a few cases but for the most part there was becoming a rather alarming decrease of altruistic souls whose motto is "if you receive one black eye, don't decline another. The second is bound to be better than the first on the theory that practice makes perfect." So with the long-stretched Mr. Kelly in the fold, all of the club's ills should be soothed.

At any rate, Kelly may forego his pranks and stick healthy. Without doubt this would also be of impartial aid to the Bruins. Charley Grimm, veteran first baseman, who knows everything about baseball but how to avoid being injured, sort of became perilously familiar with "Lefty" O'Doul's spikes in a recent league contest and hospitalized for the sixty-sixth time, it seems, in his somewhat unfortunate career. In the exigency, Kelly, hitting all manner of ball for Minneapolis, whence he trekked after his banishment from Cincinnati, was summoned.

The summoning meant nothing more to Kelly than sheer revenge. The fellow is a landlord in San Francisco and they tell me of how he has so much currency he could probably buy out the clubs of Cincinnati and New York, where he was before transferring to Ireland, if he cared to grow reckless momentarily. But George is bashful that way and the pain of facing the magnates who shunted him off might be more than his forbearance would permit, and moreover, he might grow sick again at the sight, and thus jeopardize his chances of making a few thousand dollars if the Cubs enter the world series.

About ten years back George reported to McGraw through the recommendation of his uncle. He showed everything, height and reach for first base, a powerful wing, and ferocity at bat. But when he was dispatched into where it counts, the fellow lost all trace of his abilities and performed like Gertrude Ederle in a bath tub. Kelly averaged .300 in batting for three years, against the giants—about .100 a year. When McGraw's patience had been drained, Kelly was in Pittsburgh, on the Pirates. There he went after practicing pitching for John, who had advised him that his arm alone was worthy of cultivation. The rest of his body might be tossed into the Smithsonian Institute for all McGraw cared.

After a month's trial Kelly was back in New York. Dreyfuss had explicitly explained that he was highly embarrassed to point out Kelly as his first baseman when eight of his pitchers were clamoring to become first basemen because they could out-hit him batting with an undernourished toothpick. "He's a blessing," Dreyfuss barked, "in New York."

Toward the end of 1917 Kelly fled to Rochester, where he was farmed to exhaustion. George then played the best ball of his life, during 1918, for he was enlisted in the army all year. The following season Kelly was let loose from the Giants entirely, along with Waite Hoyt and some cash for Catcher "Oil" Smith. Kelly really began hitting by this time and after compiling a .356 mark and knocking some sort of record, he replaced Hal Chase for the Giants, who recalled him. Since then George developed into more than an ordinary ball player, mixing ability with versatility until his game became profound.

It is to be assumed that George never forgot the art of being incapacitated, for he forgot the art of being incapacitated and this is probably the reason why Joe McCarthy, constantly encompassed by hospital atmosphere, and cognizant of Kelly's sensibility on ball fields, is winking his signals through one eye and linking his apprehensiveness for Kelly through the other.
